Nevada Cannabis Compliance Board Debuts Online

The Nevada Cannabis Compliance Board (CCB) has launched several resources and ways to connect online.

The public can now access information about the CCB through its new website and social media accounts. Along with laws & regulations, and guidance for consumers, the website includes an interactive feature to search up-to-date licenses and information regarding owners, officers, and board members.

Board meetings will also be archived on YouTube.

Along with new online tools to connect, the CCB has unveiled its logo, mission statement, and guiding principles.

“These online resources will allow businesses, consumers, stakeholders, and the general public to access records and information at their convenience,” Executive Director Tyler Klimas said. “As the CCB begins its oversight responsibilities of the state’s cannabis industry, transparency and ease of access to pertinent data are a priority.”

For planning purposes, the CCB becomes fully authorized Wednesday, July 1st. Its inaugural board meeting is set for Tuesday, July 21st. More details to come.
