Hello,

I believe that the best solution to ensure that the public has the ability to be informed about the product they are buying is to require cultivators to add any type of remediation (listing the specific type of remediation used) that they used on the specific batches to the Soil Amendment that is available to the public if they request it from the dispensaries. I do not believe that adding it to all labels is the best solution. The CCB would also need to inform the public that they do have the ability to request any lab results and soil amendments from the dispensary when they purchase product.
